It's been many years now when Lawson Wooten's brother, Kenneth, my lifelong friend [rip], first took me to Carolyn's and Lawson's home she greeted me as though we'd always known one another ... warm and congenial, giving me the tour of their home, even taking me to see her late son's room, showing me his favorite things, telling me his story, of him and his exploits, and upon discovering I collect knives, she even gifted me one of his, which I treasure to this day.

When I first met Carolyn, I was stunned by her outward and inner beauty that shown forth like a warming star.

I can see why Carolyn and Lawson loved one another so deeply ... the perfect match.

Lawson, I am saddened by Carolyn's passing, but happy, too, that she left so many of your beautiful shared memories to comfort and keep you company.

I'm always here for you, my very-very longtime friend.
