It was truly one of my life's privileges to know Chip Clanton. We worked together and laughed our way through the tough times, just to keep our sanity. He was the first one through the door in the morning and had coffee ready. He was always approachable and could talk forever about anything. We became good friends in short order, shared interests in music, politics, hunting, you name it, we were buddies. I was blessed to hunt with him one weekend where I witnessed the bond he had with his family, which is so prevalent in these wonderful photos. This world is not right without Chip in it. He will be sorely missed

“ I’m absolutely heart broken to learn of Chip’s passing. The Clanton family has in my life as far back as can remember, and a major influence upon me. So many memories tied to them, and a lot of laughs both then and now.

Those memories are precious, and a human fallacy is that because we have 1,000 good memories of a person, we’ll have 1,000 more. It’s not enough to settle for memories. Strive to make more. Rest assured old friend that I will think of you often, and think well. Vaya con dios, mi amigo. My heart goes out to your family and loved ones
