“ Sunday's were our days , the two of us jumping in that mustang headed to needville. I'll say this I wasn't ready for you to go I had so much I wanted you to see and would of loved to have gotten your approval. I don't know how hard you leaving us is hitting everyone else, I just know I will never be the same again. You were my ace, my go to man, my "hey dad how would you do this". You lived a great life had the chance to meet your grandkids and watch them grow. Rest easy daddy no more pain and no more hurt. Forever my best friend forever #myhero

“ I remember me, Pete (Elpidio) and younger brother Andrew getting in trouble (probably throwing rocks at the chickens or something like that) mom told us to go cut a switch so we could receive our punishment. While walking to the tree for the switch, Pete decides now is a good time to take off running across the cotton field. Andrew and I were ordered to go bring him back. After about an hour we finally got him back (kicking and fighting the whole time) we got a good taste of the switch. And so that was the end of a beautiful sunny summer day growing up at the farm with Pete. As for the rest of the day, who knows, there were so many events just like that one. I love you Pete, I'll miss you brother.
