“ I've known Justin since he was a little guy in elementary school. He was like part of the family, joining us when he could at family get together's. We were just talking about how he helped me just two years ago to move into my new home. He was a caring person. He cared about my son and would call and tell me to take care of him. I know he loved my nephew, Eric. I can't help but picture Eric running up to him as he entered heaven with a big hug and a "I can't believe your here"!!! Right behind him are Zac and Jet, their childhood friends. All four of them together again. All too young to be gone already. Who knows why, but our God knows why. Its best to believe that God knows best, and trust that. I know that all of you will grieve for a very long time. I still cry for Eric and miss him so much. Life can be hard but losing our loved ones is 100 times harder. It does not get easier, you will just learn to live differently. I hurt for you all and his children. May God hold each of you in his arms and get you through this one day at a time.
