“ This rain of sadness falls on everyone, the same old rain, that has touched countless others and that will eventually touch us all. So, for a moment I will try to walk with you between the raindrops, which are our tears. We have spent more time together in these past few months than we have since I was a small child. How is it you kept your sense of humor intact? Never a harsh word. No matter the difficulty of the moment. Mom I miss you so.
