“ I had numerous conversations with Wayne over the last 5 years when I retired. I would walk every morning by his house. Most times he would be driving down Avenue K and stop to chat. He told me a lot about his life, all the books he had written and the one he was currently working on. He would tell me the story he was writing and mentioned just how immersed in the story he would get. He had a tremendous, creative mind. I will miss those conversations and I am sad that he is gone.
