“ You are one of those rare individuals that can make a place of employment seem like fun, and not something some people call work. I'm gonna miss our talks and hereing you laugh. I know we'll see each other again, so until then, I love you man, and my thoughts and prayers are with your loved ones..

I admire your integrity in your work at Akzo and your commitment to education when you went back to college. I will miss you, my friend. I will miss your stories. I will miss your sense of humor most; you had an infectious laugh. For your family, I am so sorry for your loss. May God strengthen you during this time and give you peace.*

“ *Sheldon was a great friend and a fantastic person. We shared some good times the few times we were together. Definitly a big help on special project teams as well as a blast to work with.
I am very proud and honored that I was able to know him. He will always be my friend.*

“ It's hard for me to believe that in this age of advanced medicine that you went from having stomach problems to in the ICU in three weeks.....And now you are gone. It is beyond belief. I enjoyed the time we worked together! You taught me so much; you were an asset to our department! I always felt guilty that we under-utilized your extensive skill sets. See you on the other side man.

“ I am so sorry for the family's loss. Shelly was a special childhood friend I felt like was my brother growing up. Although I didn't get to spend much time with him during our adult years everytime I did see him it was like it was just yesterday I saw him. I love the Holder Family. May God give you strength.

“ From my first day at Witco, Sheldon began making an impact on my life. He led by example, obtaining several APICS certifications, including the extremely difficult CIRM. I'm absolutely certain I never would have achieved my own certifications without Sheldon's continuous support and encouragement.

Since I left the plant, I've missed our warm conversations about his childhood and his frequent updates on Nicholas and Abbigail. He never smiled more than when talking about his family.

You will be truly missed, my friend!
