“ Willy was definitely a character but was always there when you needed a hand or just shoot the breeze. Our first meeting was during a job interview. The question he posed was "what would you do if you had a disagreement with a co-worker", in which my response was; we can just step outside to talk about it. Willy then responded with, so you want to fight me then? The interview panel erupted in laughter which eased the tension and I clarified that I meant to say "talk aside or to the side". We continued talking about this for years after. Though we had our disagreements at time, he was always there to lend a helping hand. Stubborn at times in wanting to take the scenic route but always a learning lesson.

My deepest condolences to Aurora, Mark and the Nulisch family. While we all say these words with the best intentions and offer support, I understand the hurt of losing a husband, father and friend comes with its own burden. The passing of someone we know is always a grim reminder that we are mortal and we ourselves will one day meet our own fate. Save a place in line for the rest of us left in the wake and may you rest in paradise amigo. Godspeed.

“ Always remember fishing in Oyster creek when we were younger every chance we got. We hardly ever caught very many and were together so much your parents ask you if we were more than friends. Always a funny memory when we would revisit it. Love Ya brother and will dearly miss you. Find us some good spots to fish for when we see each other again.
